July 27, 2010, New York City: As part of an ongoing series of special exhibitions focusing on cultural awareness, the Ana Tzarev Gallery is presenting works by Sanam Enayati, a noted artist whose works are greatly influenced by her early life in Iran prior to her move to the U.S. when she was twenty-two years old. Enayati was a featured artist in the 2010 Freedom to Create exhibition. Presently on the faculty of The Art Institute of New York City, she holds an M.F.A. from the New York School of Visual Arts. Describing her paintings, Sanam Enayati states, “My work expresses a blend of cultural and socio-political significance aesthetically, through assortment of substance and material representations.” The exhibition is on view through August 28.

The Ana Tzarev Gallery: The Ana Tzarev Gallery features the work of the artist Ana Tzarev as well as presenting an ongoing schedule of special exhibitions of works by other artists consistent with Ana Tzarev’s commitment to cultural awareness and social consciousness.
